

HISTORY OF THE JACK PIZZEY CUP

The Jack Pizze Cup was inaugurated in 1963 with the then Queensland Minister for Education, the Rt. Hon. Jack Charles Allan Pizze donating the trophy. Jack Pizze was a secondary school teacher and became Premier of Queensland on 17 January 1968 until his sudden and untimely death on 31 July of that year.

The Jack Pizze Cup became the national school's tennis championships for secondary schools and superseded the Bruce Cup, which had been inaugurated in 1938. The Bruce Cup then became the trophy for the national primary school's championships. The competition was intended to include all States of Australia, but until 1978 the Jack Pizze Cup was only conducted between New South Wales and Queensland.

Mr Alan Cook, Life Member of the QSSA, was instrumental in the foundation of the Pizze Cup. In those early years it was his foresight, direction and perseverance that kept the Pizze Cup an active competition. During this time many leading Australian players including Wendy Turnbull, Evonne Cawley, John Alexander, Phil Dent, Mark Edmondson and Ross Case competed in this event.

In 1978 the Pizze Cup was played in Melbourne in conjunction with the Federation Cup, and for the first time it was contested on an Australia wide basis. This was made possible with sponsorship by Bancroft, which was then a subsidiary company of Colgate-Palmolive Australia, and the drive and determination of Alan Basford. The format of the competition changed slightly to include not only the team event, but also an individual single. The inaugural Australian Secondary Schools Singles Championships (then known as the Bancroft Cup) was won by Peter Doohan (NSW) and Elizabeth Little (VIC). In 1980 Colgate-Palmolive took complete responsibility for the event and the singles Championships became known as the Colgate Cup. 1994 saw the entry of McDonald's Tennis Australia and Tennis Australia as sponsors of the event and the singles event was then known as the McDonald's Cup. The plate event of the individual event was named in honour of the late Kevin Horrigan, a great stalwart of school's tennis.

1997 saw Tennis Australia stand alone as sponsors of the championship singles event.

Since 1978 most of Australia's top players have competed in the Pizze Cup, including Wally Masur, Ann and Liz Minter, Jenny Byrne, Simon Youl, Mark Woodforde, John Frawley, Richard Fromberg, Patrick Rafter, Sam Stosur and Casey Dellacqua to mention just a few.
